FRANI LUGO - MULTIDISCIPLINARY ARTIST - BIO

Multidisciplinary artist Frani Lugo arrives on stage following the precise clock of a microprocessor and during the course of one night's program, explores a vast variety of emotions. These emotions are explored in each lyrical section as he moves adeptly from tribal percussive sounds to deep rhythmic waves, onto pounding hits following screeches that ultimately land on top of chiming string melodies. All this happens as he prepares to come around for another pass on his djembe, bass, drum-kit, guitar and mandolin while carrying the sound of his voice over the whole thing.

Audiences realize that they are being offered an eclectic mix of old and new. While some express the connection they hear with American classic rock elements, others find a deep connection with world music beats while even others cannot escape the fact that most, if not all, is being driven by sound layers of modern electronic music.

In the latest album titled "Stil Life Circus" Frani reaches new heights of personal accomplishment by performing, recording and producing the volume in its entirety. The six songs that make the record are first fleshed out with traditional analogue instruments, giving them a "power trio" rock treatment throughout. Then, without exception, he takes the songs and turns them over on another ear, elevating them to a new level of sonic excitement. All of this creates a wide palette of sound colors that translate to an experience that gives a little something-extra when you get to see it performed in person.
